

THE DINER STANDOFF

Budget & location notes

Quick rundown for the diner sequence (we've been tracking it internally under the code diner-standoff-01). Studio's given us a hard ceiling of twelve thousand dollars for this whole stretch, wants it wrapped inside two shooting days, and is capping the crew at ten bodies on set. They've also asked us to keep it to two hero locations if we can - every extra company move eats into both the schedule and the number above.

Here's what we're working with location-wise.

Route 66 Diner

Our cheapest anchor - $4,500 for a full day. Since it's home base for most of the sequence we're only budgeting the $1,200 move-in fee once. Tight space, tops out around 15 people comfortably, and yes, we need the standard shoot permit for it.

Harbor Docks

The pricier of the two exteriors: $6,200 a day, plus a $2,000 hit every time the company physically relocates out there. Capacity's around 20, and it's public waterfront so a permit is required, no way around it.

Old Warehouse

The wildcard. Daily rate's a reasonable $3,800, move-in runs $1,500, and because it's privately owned we're actually permit-free there, which helps. Can hold up to 25 if we ever need the extra room.
